Britain Bc Life In Britain

Prehistoric Britain

Farming was introduced to Britain around 4,500 BC Hunter-gather ways of life continued but the increasing range of material culture, such as pottery, leaf-shaped arrowheads and polished stone axes, and the control of local resources by individual groups would have caused it to be replaced by distinct territories occupied by different groups A few Neolithic monuments overlie Mesolithic sites

Settlement Sites to 1500 - Historic England

10,000 BC and Mesolithic (10,000-4500 BC) Britain has been one of a transient population of hunter-gatherers who obtained food by hunting, fishing and gathering wild resources and lived in temporary camps or shelters Settlement evidence has come from both caves and open sites The prevalence of material from caves in the archaeological record for some early periods reflects their favourable
