Shameful Admission or Sincere Apology? Jane Pennington

Shame (page 312 in "Shame and Pride: Affect, Sex, and the Birth of the Self") This handy configuration developed by psychiatrist, Donald Nathanson illustrates the defensive behaviors and mental mechanisms we use to avoid acknowledging our shame (This will be explored in greater detail later) This group of inmates were attacking others, attacking themselves, hiding and withdrawing from

Does the way we measure shame create a gender difference?

Else-Quest et al (2012) suggested that the gender difference in shame could be caused by innate sex differences, but did not specify what this innate difference may be Exploring the possibility that there is no gender difference in shame Differential responses to shame An alternative view is that there is no gender difference in shame but, instead, the experience of shame for boys and men is
