to the view that human nature consists in a universal and innate set of adaptations, formed by natural selection acting on genetic variation, which has remained largely unchanged since the Pleistocene (Laland and Brown 2002) A consequence of this is that although the Santa Barbara School acknowledges that cultural change is causally significant, its impact is usually ... Cultural Relativism and Universal Human Rights Author(s) ...

A cultural relativist account of human rights, however, seems to be guilty of logical contradiction If human rights are based in human nature, on the simple fact that one is a human being, and if human nature is universal, then how can human rights be relative in any fundamental way? The simple answer is that human nature is itself in some measure culturally relative There is a ...
